BOARDING-HOUSE
GOSSIP IN COURT

A Well-Dressed Quartet
Lectured by Magistrate Teale.

1901
World Almanac
and Encyclopedia.
All Newsdealers or by Mail, 25c.

Boarding-house gossip was judicially frowned on by Magistrate Teale in the Adams Street Court, Brooklyn, to-day, and incidentally he delivered a lecture on the free use of the tongue, which he designated as "that unruly member."
The lecture was delivered to Mrs.
Mary Muriele and Miss Isabelle Campbell, who live at 276 Schermerhorn street, Brooklyn, and Mr. and Mrs.
Charles L. Willis, who live at another boarding-house a few doors away.

Mrs. Muriele is the widow of a Cuban patriot, is pretty, with the regulation Cuban eyes and olive complexion, and in court she wore a striking red and black hat. She was the complainant in the case.

Mr. Willis, the defendant, is a stylish young man employed by Lampart & Holt, the shipping merchants. He was brought into court on a charge of slander. This was based on a letter he wrote to Miss Campbell, in which he mentioned that lady not to circulate rumors that he was not a married man.
Anyway, he concluded, she had "no room for talking," for she was the roommate of a woman whose character was not above reproach. Mrs. Muriele was the roommate.

Willis acknowledged writing the letter, but said it was not written to Mrs. Muriele, and was only intended to stop the rumors about his domestic relations, as they placed his wife in an unpleasant position. Mrs. Willis here came up to assert that she was duly and properly married a month ago, and then came the lecture, the four being sent to their homes with the admonition to keep their tempers and "go and sin no more."

During the examination it developed that the trouble grew out of boarding-house jealousies and bickerings while all four lived at 276 Schermerhorn street.

BISHOP CREIGHTON BURIED.

Great Throng of Churchmen and Notables at the Funeral.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Right Rev. Man-dell Creighton, D. D., Bishop of London, who died Jan. 14, was buried to-day in St. Paul's Cathedral. No other Bishop of London had been buried there since John King, whose body was laid to rest in the Cathedral 200 years ago.

The ceremony, which was profoundly impressive, was attended by a great number of clergymen of all denominations, headed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, who officiated at the grave side.

The Queen, Emperor William of Germany, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York sent representatives and tributes. Several of the Ambassadors, including the United States Ambassador, Joseph H. Choate, were present.

Pellegrino Smith Leaves for the Kiondike to Make His Fortune.

Pellegrino Fred F. Smith has gone to seek his fortune in the Kiondike. He left without the formality of resigning.
Jan. 3 he drew his pay, and has not appeared for duty since.

To-day, when Smith's name was called in the West Thirtieth street station, Capt. Thomas explained that he had been gone more than five days without leave, and that his father had sent his fire key and shield to him, saying his son had gone to the gold mine.
